Abstract

A color gamut compression apparatus for converting a source color generated by an information-input apparatus into a target color inside a color gamut reproducible by an information-output apparatus. The color gamut compression apparatus computes a point of compression such that the point of compression lies on a substantially straight line connecting a point of convergence and a source color, and lies inside the color gamut of the information-output apparatus.